Thought for Today

It is no humility for a man to think less of himself than he ought, though it might rather puzzle him to do that.—Spurgeon.

No Proper Basis For Suspicion

Naval Captain Changes Answer After he had Said Suspicion Existed

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(P)—Naval Captain L. F. Safford testified today that he had written a secret code letter in January of 1944 saying that "No one... can be trusted" in naval operations. He also testified that in this code letter he was busy lining up evidence "for the cause." Under questioning Safford said the "cause" was the exoneration of Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel from responsibility for the Pearl Harbor disaster. Safford redacted and slow in answering some questions by Rep. Murphy (D-Penn.), said he sent the letter to Capt. A. D. Kramer.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(P)—Naval Captain L. F. Safford, reversing his previous Pearl Harbor testimony, said today "I have no suspicion against any individual" as to high command violation of laws against destroying public records.

Earlier, Safford had testified that "suspicion exists" in his mind that Gen. George C. Marshall and Adm. Harold R. Stark had so broken the law.

The question at issue was whether copies of a "winds code" message which Safford said gave Washington a three-day tipoff of the Japanese attack on December 7, 1941, was received here and later destroyed.

Under questioning by Senator Lucas (D-Ill.) of the Senate-House committee, Safford said he did not suspect responsibility for destruction of the records rested with a group of naval officers, as he had said before.

No Basis For Suspicion
"But you do have suspicion against Stark and Marshall?" asked Lucas, referring to a reply Safford had given Rep. Clark (D-NC).

"I have no proper basis for suspicion against any individual," Safford replied.

"Do you want to change your testimony of a while ago?" "I would like to change my answer to Mr. Clark's and your question. I have no suspicion directed against any individuals who can be named."

Rep. Cooper (D-Tenn.) said he couldn't understand that kind of answer, that it appeared that if Safford had suspicions they must be directed against persons.

Safford said it was a fact that official records "are missing" but he did not know how.

Cooper pressed for a direct reply, and the witness said:

"I have no suspicion against any individual."

Knew It Meant War

The officers whom Safford previously had said should not be suspected were Capt. A. D. Kramer, Capt. A. H. McCollum, Admiral T. S. Wilkinson, and Admiral Leigh Noyes. He said they, with him, were the "we" in his statement that a winds message had been received and "we knew it meant war."

Lucas, referring to other witnesses who have disclaimed any knowledge of a "winds" message, wanted to know "How could all these people be wrong?"

"I can't explain other people," Safford replied.

"They were all loyal and patriotic Americans," said Lucas in noting that they had no reason to suspect or destroy records.

"Yes, sir, all of them," said the witness.

Earlier, Safford had been asked this question by Rep. Clark:

Printers Donate To Two Funds

At a meeting of the Sedalia Typographical union Sunday in Labor hall, a sum of $50 was raised to be added to the Cpl. William J. Eckles fund sponsored by the War Mothers Club No. 2. A donation was also made to the Infantile Paralysis fund.

Nomination of international officers was balloted upon during the business session over which William A. Burton, the president of the local, presided.

Boy Accidentally Killed

WILLIAMSVILLE, Mo., Feb. 4.—(P)—Donald Bratton, aged 12, was accidentally killed Sunday by another boy at conclusion of a rabbit-hunting trip. The boys, according to Coroner Tri Marshall, were unloading their guns when a rifle held by Willis White, 12, was accidentally discharged. The bullet struck Bratton, who is son of Howard Bratton, in the heart.

To Die on Gallows

General Yamashita, convicted by the American military commission in Manila of condoning atrocities, was refused detention of the death sentence on the gallows by the supreme court today when it denied his petition filed in that court.

Yamashita to Meet Death On the Gallows

Supreme Court Refuses Writ of Habeas Corpus

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(P)—The supreme court refused today to save Japanese General Yamashita on the gallows.

Chief Justice Stone delivered the supreme court's 6-2 decision. Justice Jackson, now acting as chief U. S. prosecutor in the Nazi trials in Europe, had no part in Yamashita's case. Justices Murphy and Rutledge dissented.

The court overruled Yamashita on all points.

Stone's 7,000 word opinion declared:

"It appears that the order convening the commission (of five generals trying Yamashita) was a lawful order, that the commission was lawfully constituted, that petitioner (Yamashita) was charged with violation of the law of war and that the commission had authority to proceed with the trial and in doing so did not violate any military, statutory or constitutional command."

Convicted in Manila
Yamashita was convicted by the American military commission in Manila of condoning uncounted atrocities by his invading troops in the Philippines.

The enemy general was the first Pacific war leader to be tried as a war criminal. In appealing to the supreme court he contended that the military commission did not have authority to try him.

Stone said:

"We have considered, but find it unnecessary to discuss other contentions (by Yamashita) which we find to be without merit."

Petition Denied

"We therefore conclude that the detention of the petitioner for trial and his detention upon his conviction, subject to the prescribed review by the military authorities, were lawful, and that his petition for certiorari (asking the supreme court to review action of the Philippines supreme court in refusing him a writ of habeas corpus), and his petition for leave to file in this court petitions for writs of habeas corpus and prohibition should be and they are denied."

Last December 7—on the fourth anniversary of Pearl Harbor—the military commission in Manila decreed death by hanging for Yamashita.

The Japanese protested that "my conscience is clear." He was locked in a Manila prison while three of the U. S. army attorneys who defended him before the commission were flown to Washington to argue his appeals.

The three and the government counsel argued the unprecedented case before the supreme court for 5½ hours—almost twice the time allotted for argument of the usual cases.

Both for and Against VA

TOPEKA, Kas., Feb. 4.—(P)—Criticism and support of the Veterans' Administration were heard in Kansas today.

R. M. Collins, director of the Veterans' Service of the Kansas Board of Social Welfare, joined the American Legion in criticism of the VA, saying its program lacked planning.

Dr. Karl Menninger, manager of Winter hospital, (taken over by the Veterans' Administration December 1), said he was "amazed at the speed with which the necessary administration details have been expected by Washington." Collins said 4,000 Kansas veterans' claims lay unprocessed on desks of VA personnel, 131 veterans are awaiting hospitalization and 300 have subsistence claims awaiting action.

Teachers Home From Service Back on Jobs

Some Changes in Faculty of Public Schools

Raymond Peterson, honorably discharged from the Army Air Corps as a sergeant technician February 3 at Jefferson Barracks, will resume duties as principal of Mark Twain school Tuesday, the position he held before leaving for military service March 8, 1943. Peterson was stationed first at Sheppard Field, Wichita Falls, Tex., in the classification department and later was transferred to the personnel department at Ft. Sill, Okla. He and Mrs. Peterson reside at 235 South Quincy avenue.

With his return, the following changes in school assignments have been made:

Miss Charline Mitchell, who has been acting principal at Mark Twain, has been transferred to the principalship at Horace Mann.

Miss Barnett To Broadway
Miss Hazel Barnett, who has been acting principal at Horace Mann since the resignation of J. E. Morrow, July 1, 1945, has been transferred to Grade Two at Broadway.

Mrs. Leota Ray has been transferred from Grade Two at Broadway to Grade Four at Washington to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mrs. Wanita Babb, whose husband has returned from overseas.

Returned From Service
The following school employees have returned to their former positions after release from military service:

Miss Margaret Bapple, social science teacher at Smith-Cotton high school; Clayton Dickson, social science teacher at Smith-Cotton; Ralph Dow, mathematics teacher and coach at Smith-Cotton; Ralph Guenther, instrumental music teacher at Smith-Cotton; Burney Morris, vocal music teacher at Smith-Cotton (since resigned); Raymond Peterson, principal at Mark Twain; Harold William Powers, commerce at C. C. Hubbard high school; Robert Rogers, industrial arts teacher and coach at Smith-Cotton; James Stubbs, social science teacher at Smith-Cotton.

Still In Service
Still in service are Joe Benson, principal of Smith-Cotton; Houston Chandler, social science teacher and coach at Hubbard high school; and Neal Owens, science teacher at Smith-Cotton.

T. L. Crain, custodian at Smith-Cotton, and Robert Wild, science teacher at Broadway, are additional returned veterans now employed, not previously members of the school system.

Former teachers who were in service but did not return are Stein Finnell, who died in service February 15, 1943, and Elbert Shores, now teaching in Kansas City.

Head of CMSTC Club Speaker

Rotarian George W. Deimer, president of Central Missouri State Teachers' college, Warrensburg, spoke on the subject "Educational Opportunities for Veterans" at the noon meeting today of the Sedalia Rotary club at Hotel Bothwell.

Speaking with the purpose of advancing more intelligent aid to returning veterans, Mr. Deimer stressed the importance of education, explained public laws 268 and 16 and said in part, "At no period in history has the importance of education been recognized or stressed as it is now."

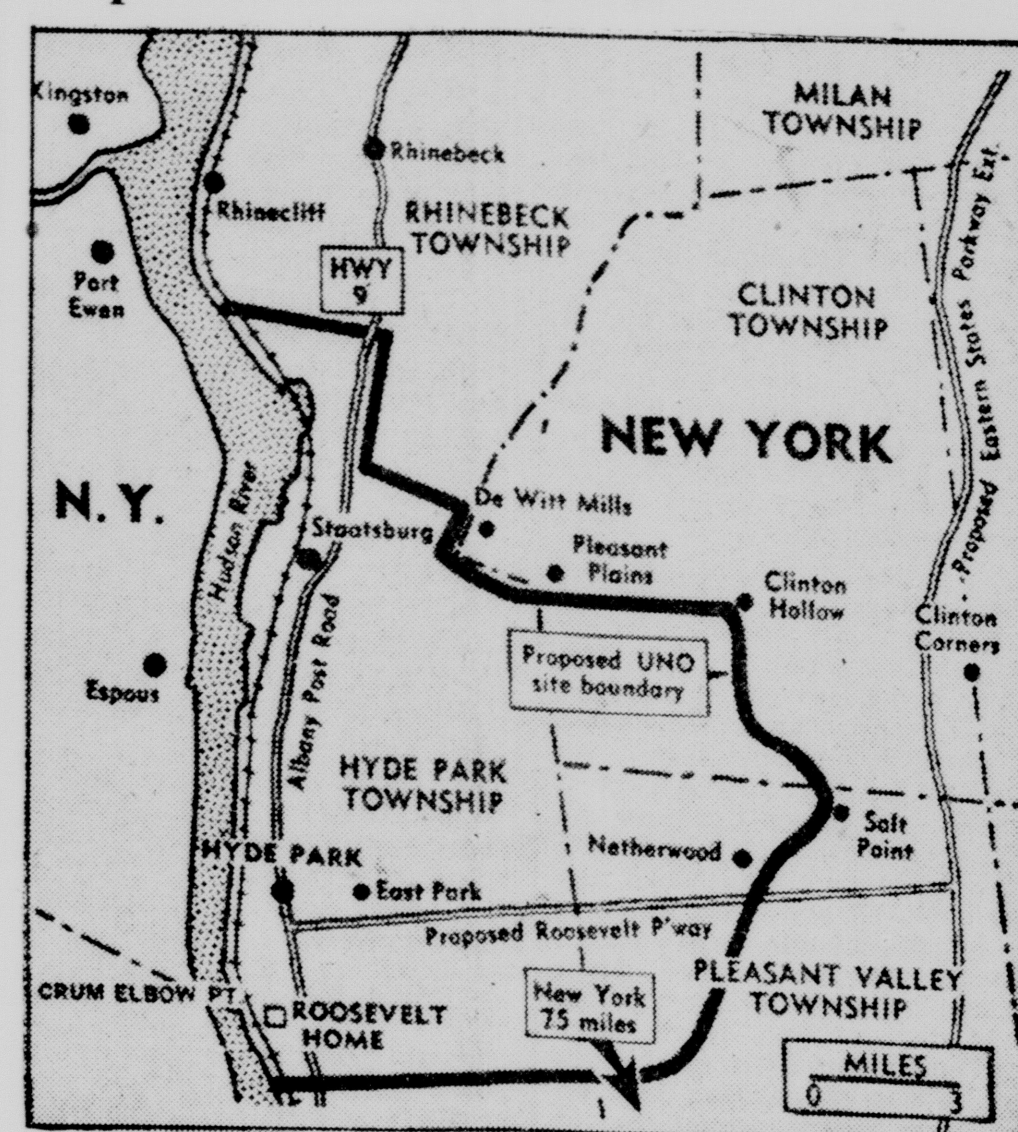

Rotarians' tremendous responsibility is to aid returning veterans to become adjusted to a proper place in society."

Visitors were: Rotarians Walter Flora of Decatur, Ill., Raymond Rollins of Warrensburg, Capt. Irby Bunding, Col. James E. Conner, O. V. Richeson, Alfred Suter and Robert Thompson.

Proposed Site for UNO

This tract of land, proposed for the UNO site, embraces 47 square miles. Plan would eliminate the villages of Hyde Park and Staatsburg from the international zone, but it is estimated 1,500 persons will have to move from this area to make it the international world capital. (NEA TELEMAP)

Connecticut Village Disturbed Over Inclusion in UNO Capital

GREENWICH, Conn., Feb. 4.—(P)—This normally peaceful Connecticut community, its nearby hills dotted with homes of many wealthy New York lawyers, bankers and business men, was in turmoil today over its inclusion in the site recommended for the United Nations world capital.

An estimated one-third of the town of Greenwich lies in the 42 square miles of Connecticut and Westchester county, N. Y., countryside rated No. 1 by the UNO site inspection committee which returned to London yesterday to report to the general assembly on the proposed location for permanent UNO headquarters.

Protests also came from some of the New York state communities affected, especially the 200-year-old town of North Castle, all of whose 1,000 inhabitants live in the proposed permanent site, but it was in Greenwich that the storm struck hardest.

On one side property owners confronted with the prospect of eviction from land that has been in their families for generations protested that the choice was "unfair and undemocratic."

A High Honor
On the other side was a less vociferous group, among them a representation of Greenwich shopkeepers, who declared the choice bestowed a high honor on the community and that the cries of opponents reflected selfish interest.

Originally, the move to interest the UNO in this region was initiated by a group of Stamford, Conn., residents who asked Kingsley Gillespie, publisher of the Stamford Advocate, to sound out public opinion on the matter. A committee to promote the Stamford area then was organized.

All opponents were unanimous in declaring that they were not fighting the United Nations organization, and that they wholeheartedly endorsed the UNO principles.

Hoped Protests Brought Results
Just what they could do to keep their property from being swallowed up in an international zone they were not certain. They hoped, however, that their protests might cause the general assembly in London to act in their favor.

Civic, social and political organizations fired a volley of protest cables at the United Nations assembly in London.

Theme of the messages, said John E. Lockwood, lawyer and resident of the community, was that the UNO committee was "spending $100,000,000 more than was necessary in order to be near New York City's night clubs." Lockwood referred to the cost of land in the area.

A protest cable bearing nearly 1,000 signatures also was dispatched from Greenwich, while churches and World War II veterans in Bedford Villa, N. Y., sent others.

British Women Wed to Yanks Join Husbands

Nightmarish Voyage, Four-fifths Were Seaisick

By Relman Morin

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—(P)—Storm-tossed and tired, but radiant with anticipation, the first group of "British brides"—English women who married American soldiers during the war—reached New York today on the army transport, Argentina, after a nine-day nightmarish voyage across the North Atlantic.

A total of 451 women and 175 children were aboard the ship which docked shortly before 7:00 a. m.

The wives ranged in age from Mrs. Ben F. Butler, 16, to Mrs. Harold N. Cooper, 44.

With her 13-months-old daughter, Mrs. Butler was en route to Roanoke Rapids, N. C. Mrs. Cooper and her daughter, 17, by a previous marriage, and son, 15 months by the present one, was rejoining her husband in Manhattan Beach, Calif.

Thirty of the women were expectant mothers.

Risked Their Lives
Three literally risked their lives to make the voyage. They were in advanced stages of pregnancy, and when the Argentina encountered the first of several record-breaking storms, they were confined to the ship's hospital under constant observation by army doctors and nurses.

The brides came from England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales and Malta. They were destined for homes in 44 different states.

New York led the list with 84 women and children. Pennsylvania will receive 48, California and Illinois 40 each, Michigan 34, New Jersey 31, Massachusetts 30, and Ohio and Indiana 27 each.

Socially they represented in the majority Britain's middle- and upper classes.

New Plane Record Set

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—(P)—A new transcontinental commercial plane record was set yesterday by a TWA Constellation which flew non-stop from Burbank, Calif., to LaGuardia field in seven hours, 27 minutes and 48 seconds.

The big airliner also set a record for the number of persons carried on a coast-to-coast hop—45 passengers and a seven-member crew.

The former west-to-east commercial flight mark, 11 hours and 55 minutes, was set by a TWA Stratoliner in July, 1940.

Jack Frye, president of Transcontinental and Western Air, who piloted the Constellation on yesterday's flight, said the average speed was 345 to 350 miles an hour, with a maximum of 375 miles an hour between Fort Wayne, Ind., and Hayesville, Ohio. Altitude ranged between 15,000 and 17,000 feet, he said. The distance covered was 2,490 miles.

Last Friday the same plane set an east-west commercial record of 10 hours and 49 minutes, but made a stop at Kansas City.

The fastest time for all types of planes was the four hours, 13 minutes and 26 seconds of a jet-propelled P-80 army fighter on a transcontinental flight January 26.

Body of Aged Woman Found, Head Beaten

KANSAS CITY, Kas., Feb. 4.—(P)—The body of Mrs. Matilda Jane Hendren, 89, the head badly beaten, was found today in the kitchen of her home.

Dr. C. W. McLaughlin, county coroner, said she apparently had been struck repeatedly by a heavy weapon. Both jaws had been fractured.

She lived with her son, William T. Hendren, 63, in quarters at the rear of a grocery store they operated. A cash box in the store containing $40 was missing.

Reports Wife, Daughter Gone

Mrs. Eleanor Knox, 24, and her stepdaughter Betty Lou Knox 14, were reported to the police this morning as missing from their home by the husband and father, Chester Knox, Route 1, Beaman.

Mr. Knox reported to the police shortly after 9 o'clock this morning that his wife and daughter had been absent since Saturday, and he knew of no reason why they would have left home. He said no trouble existed between them.

Mrs. Knox is described as being 5 feet, 7 inches tall, weighs 120 pounds, has brown hair and wears black shoes, while the daughter is five feet one inch tall, weighs about 100 pounds, has blonde hair, and blue eyes.

Majority of St. Louis Schools Close

Others Picketed As Custodians and Matrons Strike

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 4.—(P)—All but 21 of the 129 elementary and high schools in St. Louis were closed today as 400 members of the AFL Custodians and Matrons union went on strike in support of their demands for a $20 monthly wage increase.

Four of the city's 13 high schools were operating, but officials at Central high said they would probably close because of a lack of lunchroom supplies. Schools still operating are being picketed.

Most pupils and teachers appeared at the regular time for classes, but were sent home when it was found the doors were locked. None of the teachers or principals have keys.

Great Day for Students
For the students it was a great day. They stood around the school buildings cheering the pickets until teachers ordered them home. Most buildings which were unlocked were closed for lack of heat.

The key situation arose when the board of education discovered all but four master keys to the 129 buildings were in possession of the striking custodians.

Using Master Keys
Four members of the building commissioner's office were traveling over the city, unlocking the schools with the master key.

An offer of Mayor Aloys Kaufmann to become a conciliator in the dispute, made late last night, has not been acted upon by either the union or the board of education.

Dr. Herbert O. Winterer, president of the board, said his group had been advised by attorneys it could not legally arbitrate the dispute.

Approximately 90,000 day students and 10,000 night students are enrolled in the St. Louis school system, which employs 3,800 teachers.

What percentage of the total enrollment was affected by the closed schools was not immediately available.

Rev. L. A. Swan Coming to City

Succeeding the Rev. Samuel W. Jensen, now in Ft. Smith, Ark., Mr. Swan comes to Sedalia directly from army service and with Mrs. Swan and their 11-year-old daughter Marjorie will reside at the church parsonage, 912 South Osage avenue.

During his four years' military duty, the pastor served with the Anti-Submarine command, head-quarters at New York City; Technical Training command, Madison, Wisc.; and with the Air Transport command in Alaska and Canada.

Mr. Swan, who has held pastorates in the states of Iowa, Nebraska and Colorado, is a graduate of Midland college, Freemont, Neb., received theological training at the Chicago Lutheran seminary and was ordained in 1931.

He is a past president of the Kiwanis club of Missouri Valley, Iowa.

Queen Mary Bringing Brides and Children

ABOARD THE S. S. QUEEN MARY, Feb. 4.—(P)—In spite of fresh storm warnings, the giant liner Queen Mary, whose departure was delayed yesterday by gales, shoved off today for America with her load of GI brides and children.

Officers said the waters of the channel to the open sea, only really hazardous part of the trip, were relatively calm.

The liner is carrying a total of 1,707 brides and 640 children.

Conference Called Hurriedly

Called by Truman In an Effort to End the Steel Strike Dadlock

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(P)—President Truman held a hurriedly-called conference with Secretary of Labor Schwelmbach and CIO President Philip Murray today in a renewed White House effort to end the steel strike deadlock.

Neither Schwelmbach nor Murray would comment as they emerged from the half hour session, which began at the unusually early hour of 9:30 a. m., but the labor secretary said:

"We came out smiling." Murray, who also is head of the CIO United Steel Workers, said only to reporters:

"The president asked me to come over to talk with him about the steel situation."

"Whatever is said has got to come from him," Murray added. Asked if he was optimistic for a settlement, he said merely "I'm forever an optimist."

More Cheerful
Administration sources appeared to be becoming more cheerful again about prospects for a break in the deadlock between Murray's union and the steel companies.

Immediately after the conference, White House aides announced that OPA Administrator Chester Bowles would see the president at 3:30 this afternoon. Bowles has been holding out for a $2.50 a ton increase in steel prices, while the industry is seeking a $6.25 boost to compensate for a wage increase.

The president is reported to be sticking by his proposal that the 750,000 striking steel workers be given an 18½ cent an hour increase. Current conferences apparently have to do with a decision on how much an increase should be granted manufacturers in the price of steel.

Third Week of Strike
Schwelmbach said he did not know whether the president had any plans to summon Benjamin F. Fairless, president of United States Steel, for a White House talk.

The meeting took place as the steel strike entered its third and perhaps climactic week.

After conferences with industry leaders, the White House is expected to bring forth a new steel price formula in a decisive effort to gain U. S. Steel corporation acceptance and send 750,000 CIO United Steelworkers back to their jobs.

Indications that some sort of showdown is due this week were seen in President Truman's plans to leave the capital next Monday for a two-week fishing cruise in Florida waters.

Although Mr. Truman has transacted state business from his yacht before, the flurry of White House activity left the impression he is hoping for a settlement before he quits town. This view was bolstered by the announced decision to bring people "outside the government" into the steel strike talks this week. Their names are to be announced shortly, said one White House official.

Mr. Truman consulted four of his own top economic advisers on Saturday—Reconversion Director John W. Snyder, OPA Administrator Chester Bowles, secretary of the Treasury Fred M. Vinson and Secretary of State Byrnes. Both Vinson and Byrnes are former reconversion directors.

Dog Exchange

HOGANSVILLE, Ga., Feb. 4.—(P)—Two years ago Will R. Perkins reported his dog, Fiji, had been stolen, but now he feels there has been a settlement.

Perkins found a note on the door of his home and a puppy lying on the porch the other day. The note said:

"I took your little dog, but am leaving you a little puppy in the place of it."

Merry-Go-Round

by Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 — Most energetic champion of the veteran has become Wilson Wyatt, ex-mayor of Louisville, Ky., now czar for federal housing. Wyatt, who believes in pulling no punches and setting his sights high, staged a closed-door battle inside the White House last week which lined up the sheep and the goats, economically speaking, among Truman's advisers.

Wyatt's battle was over housing, now considered the tightest need in the civilian economy. The conference was held in the president's office, and present were: Truman, Reconvertor John W. Snyder, press secretary Charlie Ross, private adviser George Allen and Wilson Wyatt.

Wyatt brought with him a 12-page memo giving his recommendations regarding the housing shortage. It was a forthright, all-embracing program. Instead of only 400,000 houses a year (the limit private builders say they can build), he called for around 3,000,000 houses in two years.

The program also proposed:

1. The stopping of all non-essential building. This meant cracking down on new night clubs and most new office buildings.

2. Immediate restoration of L-41. This is the order, suspended by John Snyder, which removes controls from building materials. Wyatt's plan is to place all building materials on a priority basis.

3. Give subsidies for low-cost houses up to 25 per cent — if necessary. Wyatt did not believe, however, that many subsidies would be necessary after builders got into mass production.

4. Convert army camps into housing by removing units which are suitable for civilian use.

5. Keep all housing under $10,000, and give the largest share of building materials to those putting up $5,000 houses.

Finally, Wyatt called for a tremendous use of fabricated materials as the quickest way to build houses.

Snyder Says No

The program hit Reconvertor Snyder like a ton of bricks. He was in favor of none of it. George Allen also was negative, though not as much as Snyder.

"I'm not sure you can rush in with this before you've cleared

"Murder!" They Cried

By DOROTHY STALEY

THE STORY: Arrogantly beautiful Philippa Wilson, Fletcher's wife, announces to the gathered Wilson clan that she has sent her small twin sons away so that they will not have to march in the town's Independence Day parade. This is an annual affair, sponsored by the Wilson family who own the town's main mill. Philippa's gesture is one of defiance toward her in-laws.

III

PHILIPPA flung away from the table and the rest of us just sat there. Nobody spoke.

Then Fletcher sprang after her and stopped her in the French door leading into the dining room. "Where are the boys, Phil?" I don't see how any one could have ignored the pleading in his voice.

Phil just laughed. "You would never guess," he derisively said, and with another ripple of laughter slipped under his arms, where he had pinned her back against the glass.

Fletcher stood in the doorway looking after her and the rest of us sat around the table like graven images. Then Fletcher went into the dining room and the rest of us tried to eat our breakfast as though nothing had happened. Later we heard the sharp, staccato beats of a horse on the drive. It was Philippa off somewhere.

Uncle Andrew gave a queer little laugh. "Woman amuse me," he said.

"Well, Andrew, that's one form of amusement you'll never have to pay tax on," Mr. Wilson's voice was bitter.

Uncle Andrew said shortly, "I wonder."

I looked around Cliff's Edge, at the beauty and serenity of it, and wondered why just one person could bring so much bitterness and heartache into a place that had never known it. I wondered for a moment if each place must have its share. God knows my Miss Jenny and Mr. Willson had had their share of it before they came to Cliff's Edge, but Cliff's Edge had known only serenity and peace and love until Philippa came.

THE house at Cliff's Edge sits well back from the highway and high above it, the broad driveway from it curving downward to meet the main road. It is a long gray house, with four huge pillars in the front forming a small round portico at the entrance to the great hall, which is really the living room. On either side are flagstone terraces. On the library side of the house, the terrace looks toward the woods that separate the house from the farm buildings and the fields. On the other side, the terrace looks across the broad lawns that stretch down to the rock gardens that my Miss Jenny built in the abandoned quarry fronting on the highway.

The quarry years ago had been worked from the highway so that where the stone and dirt had been quarried away, the ground was level with the highway, but on the remaining three sides the walls of the quarry rose on a jagged surface of rock and dirt until they met the level of the lawn. That is where the house got its name, for from the roadside it did indeed seem to be on the cliff's edge. My Miss Jenny and the gardeners worked steadily for three years to turn those quarry walls into beautiful hanging gardens. Miss Jenny in pants and boots used to clamber around that cliff while I watched with my heart in my throat, for that quarry wall is all of 80 feet deep. In the spring now though they are a patchwork of color and people used to come from miles around before gas rationing to see them. They would park their cars and walk across the lawn that now covers the floor of the quarry.

I used to like to walk among them and listen to their comments. But many times I would hear someone say with a little laugh, looking up at the cliff, "I had this at the end of my lawn, I would want a good stout fence up there. Might get absent-minded and walk off." "Absent-minded," someone would laugh back, "Is that what you call it when you've had one too many?"

ON an impulse I got up from the breakfast table and walked down to the garden's edge and looked over. I drew back startled for Fletcher was standing on the floor of the quarry looking up. His car, which had been kept at Cliff's Edge when he went in the Army, was parked along the road. He was, I think, as startled to see me as I to see him, but he waved his hand and went over and got in the roadster. He was, I hoped, on his way to the mills, but I was afraid he was off either to try to find the boys or to find Philippa and to wring the truth out of her or wring her neck.

I went back to the house and gathered together my mending and took it into the little morning room, just off the library. Mr. Willson and Dr. were working in there. I could hear him dictating and then while Dr. typed, he would read the morning papers. Then Dr. would go down to the mill for the mail while he talked to the office and then when she came back, all of us who were at the house would have lunch. Probably on the terrace again because we were going through the 14 days of dry, hot weather that Pennsylvania always has in July. I was speculating idly on how many there would be at lunch. On Mondays both my Miss Jenny and Betsy worked for the Red Cross and Fletcher and Philippa were off, heaven knew where, while the boys . . . I didn't miss them really, for Fletcher and Philippa had only arrived last evening and we hadn't gotten accustomed to the boys being there.

I don't know when the typewriter stopped, but just all of a sudden I heard Mr. Willson say, "Do you think I could buy her off, Dr.?"

Patton's Grave
Secretary of War Patterson, stopping at Frankfurt, Germany, the other day, expressed his desire to go to the American cemetery at Hamm, Luxembourg, to lay a wreath on General Patton's grave.

His pilot, however, reported that bad weather precluded flying. The officer handling railroad transportation also recommended not using the train, since it would have to pass through the French zone, necessitating a change of crew and a long delay, running perhaps into hours. Finally, the motor officer urged Patterson not to drive since the roads were covered with sleet and ice.

All of which exasperated the secretary of war. "If Patton were alive," he said, "He would not be stopped if he thought it was his duty to go to Hamm. Get a car and we will drive to Hamm at once."

The trip of about 120 miles packed into it two near-tragedies. The first time, the car skidded, hit the gates at a railroad crossing, crashed through and stalled on the track. The second time, in a dense fog, a truck driven by a French soldier collided with one of Patterson's cars and turned it over. No one was hurt. The party crowded into one car and went on. The wreath was laid on Patton's grave.

Bladder Stones Due To Many Causes

Written for NEA Service

Stone and gravel in the kidney and bladder have been observed since ancient times. In parts of India and China the stone problem is the same today as it was 100 years ago; in our country stones are usually discovered when they are small and some varieties are no longer seen.

Stones form in the urinary passages as the result of many factors. More than one member of a family may develop stones, but apparently they are not inherited. Stones are more common in hot countries where the passage of concentrated urine is the rule. In experimental animals, defiency of vitamin A in the diet favors stone formation.

Kidney stones form at any age, but they are uncommon under 20. Both men and women suffer from kidney stones, but bladder stones occur 40 times more frequent in men than in women. Stones are tiny or large, round or irregular, smooth or rough, hard or soft, single or multiple. Chemical analysis of stones reveals their composition to be phosphate, uric acid, oxalic acid, calcium carbonate, cystine or xanthine. Some stones cast a faint shadow on the X-ray film, while others appear as dense shadows. Stones vary in color—white, red, brown and blue.

Pain Is Usual Symptom
Kidney stones occasionally formed in patients given sulfa preparations in the early days of these drugs. Stones were sometimes so large that they plugged the kidneys. These deposits were eliminated by washing the interior of the kidney with warm fluid; today they are prevented from forming by simple precautions.

Pain is the most common symptom of kidney stone. When a stone is fixed in one position and it does not obstruct the flow of urine, it may cause a steady aching pain in the abdomen over the kidney.

Attacks of renal colic are accompanied by nausea, vomiting and cold sweats. Patients fears to move as the slightest motion starts up another paroxysm of pain. The abdomen is sore and distended; when the attack passes, the muscles relax and the patient feels better.

X-Ray Aids In Diagnosis
Stone colic may follow lifting which dislodges the stone. Pain commonly develops in the early morning or on arising. When the urine becomes obstructed, pain changes to a dull, steady, throbbing ache and the feeling as though something was going to burst. Blood and pus appear.

In attacks of colic a physician should be summoned at once to give an opiate. If the pain is not relieved by opiates, an intravenous anesthetic may be administered. If the stone attempts to pass from the kidney to the bladder, extreme pain results. Stones

The stockholders of the Hall-Kibby Dry Goods company in a meeting at the office of E. C. White elected White as vice president, H. W. Huttig, Muscatine, Iowa, as president and John R. The Hall-Kibby people have not yet settled with the insurance companies for the loss sustained by fire several weeks ago, but an amicable adjustment is anticipated in the near future. The company had a lease for 1906 on the Cassidy building that was burned, with an option for five years more, and White states they will rebuild and expect to resume business in 90 days.

per-middle classes. Most of them took the army transport only because it was the quickest means of rejoining their husbands.

It was the first "brides' ship" in more than 200 years to bring British girls to American husbands. Not since the days when sailing ships brought wives to the American colonists on the shores of New England has there been such a voyage.

Terrible Voyage

It was a strange, pathetic and even a terrible voyage.

As the Argentina slipped past the docks in Southampton, the women, lined on the decks, began singing "There'll Always Be An England." Tears streamed down their cheeks.

At almost the same instant, another group began the words for "God Bless America."

That was Saturday, January 26. On Sunday morning, as the ship passed Land's End and headed northward into the open Atlantic, she began to roll in a long groundswell. Before noon, four-fifths of the women were violently seasick.

They collapsed on the decks, fell in the passageways, limp and miserable.

Doctors, nurses, WACS, Red Cross personnel and the ship's crew worked frantically to get them to their cabins. Children were abandoned in the cabins, or left alone, screaming, by mothers who were too weak and sick to reach them. A little boy, climbing on the deck-rail, almost fell overboard before the horrified eyes of his mother, who struggled, half-crawling, across the pitching deck toward him.

Ship Was Dirty

Crewmen worked throughout the afternoon, swabbing the decks and corridors. By nightfall, the ship was so dirty that army doctors, Capt. L. E. Reynolds, of Denver, Colo., and Capt. Peter Biscotti, of Seaford, N. Y., were worried about an outbreak of disease.

The doctors attributed the high incidence of seasickness to nervous strain, reaction to the emotions of fear, apprehension and high excitement that beset women who were leaving their homes to go to a new and unfamiliar country.

More than half the 175 children on the ship were under 18 months of age.

Mothers were physically incapable of caring for them. The few who were able to walk were organized by Capt. Beatrice Breese, a WAC officer from New York City, as helpers. They went through the ship, changing and disposing of diapers, preparing the babies' formulae in the special diet kitchens, bathing them and doing what they could for the mothers.

Worst of All Days

Wednesday, January 30, was the worst of all the nine days.

Early that morning, the Argentina collided with a full gale. The wind at times reached a velocity of 70 miles an hour. It moaned and cried in the rigging, and whipped rain and hail across the decks so hard it took the paint off the masts.

By nightfall, the violence of the storm virtually had stopped the Argentina. She drove forward, groaning and creaking, at no more than five miles an hour.

Twenty miles behind her, the giant Queen Elizabeth "hove to," stopping entirely.

It was the worst storm, officers said, of a winter that has already broken bad-weather records in the ugly North Atlantic.

Truman Has Triple Problem Steel Strike, Prices, Inflation

By James Marlow
WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—(P)—President Truman is at one of the critical crossroads of his administration. You're involved in it, too. Seriously.

It's a triple problem he had to handle: The Steel strike, price control and inflation.

A White House spokesman, recognizing that those three things which affect our future are closely linked, said:

"You can't divorce the steel strike from the nation's general economy." This statement was made after Mr. Truman had talked in relays with his top government advisers Saturday.

First Secretary of State Byrnes and Treasury Secretary Vinson, both former reconversion directors; then OPA Boss Bowles and the present reconversion director, Snyder; then again with Byrnes and Vinson.

Song Conference

The conferences lasted for hours. Then Mr. Truman decided that this week he would call in men from outside the government to discuss the steel strike and other economic affairs.

Take the triple problem step by step.

The steel strike, over higher wages, is crippling reconversion and will paralyze it if the strike lasts long enough. Mr. Truman wants to end it.

He asked the CIO and the U. S. Steel corporation, weather-vane for the industry, to settle for a wage increase of 18½ cents an hour.

The CIO accepted although it had been asking an increase of 25 cents an hour.

The U. S. Steel corporation refused, saying it could grant a raise of no more than 15 cents an hour. The strike started right there.

Can't Back Down

Since he has named 18½ cents an hour as the settlement figure, the president can't very well back down from that.

The U. S. Steel corporation, after the strike started, took this stand: If it is going to grant a wage increase of 18½ cents an hour the government must allow it to increase the price of steel more than $6.25 a ton.

The government's policy to prevent runaway prices is this: Wage increases, if they mean price increases, can't be granted without government approval.

OPA has checked the steel industry's figures and says it should be allowed a price increase of only $2.50 a ton.

Latest reports from within OPA say it would be willing to allow a steel increase price up to $4 a ton—but no more—as a compromise gesture.

But it is reported, on extremely reliable authority, that Reconversion Director Snyder thinks it would be all right to give the steel companies more than $4 a ton.

Things to Consider

So Mr. Truman has to consider this:

How much will U. S. Steel settle for in the way of a price increase to end the strike and give the 18½ cent wage increase: $4 a ton? More than $4 a ton? How much more? More than $6.25?

If steel prices go up, that means the cost of steel will be higher for a great many industries which use steel. They'll be a cinch then to demand higher prices for themselves.

If U. S. Steel gets a big increase, other industries which don't use steel can come in and demand higher prices, too, on the grounds that what's fair for U. S. Steel should be fair for them.

Pretty soon the price rise—might become general and that or the demand for a price rise—would cause in the government's whole effort to prevent inflation by keeping prices down.

A general price rise means inflation. It means your dollar won't be worth what it's worth now. It won't buy as much.

It's this caving in of the price line which OPA's Bowles fears and what he has been fighting against.

Kansas Still Undeclared in The Big Six

Jayhawks Have Four More Games Before Conference Ending

By Skipper Patrick

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 4.—(P)—Iowa State's Cyclones won't notch their third Big Six basketball title in a row this season, but Coach Louis Menze's youngsters hold the key to success or failure of the league leading Kansas Jayhawks and runner-up Oklahoma Sooners, whatever hopes Iowa State had of winning at least a piece of the title, 44-43, at Norman Saturday night. Leading by five points with only four minutes of play remaining, Iowa State wilted under a Sooner rally.

Kansas, unbeaten in six conference games, has four more to go, one of them with Iowa State at Lawrence, Feb. 25.

Oklahoma, beaten only by Kansas in five starts, has five more to go, one of them with Iowa State at Ames, Iowa, Feb. 23.

If Kansas and Oklahoma can repeat their first round wins over the Cyclones the Kansas-Oklahoma game at Norman, Okla., Feb. 28 will decide the title.

Kansas will be at home for two of their remaining games, while Oklahoma must play three of five on enemy boards. Kansas' loss of forward Gib Stramel to Navy sea duty, however, may take some of the potency out of the Jayhawk attack and is certain to increase the scoring burden of Charlie (The Hawk) Black.

Dr. Forrest C. (Phog) Allen's boys can win their eighth title in eighteen years by sweeping their remaining games. Should Oklahoma topple their last five foes, including Kansas, the Jayhawks would wind up as co-champions with Oklahoma.

New Welterweight Champion

Marty Servo, a "converted southpaw" of Schenectady, N. Y., has his arm raised in victory as he was acclaimed a formidable new welterweight champion of the world after his jolting left jab and stunning left hooks had blasted the coveted crown off ancient Freddie Cochrane's reddish locks by a knockout in the fourth round of their bout at Madison Square Garden in New York City. Sports Roundup

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—(P)—The folks who have been moaning about the death of "independent baseball" might do well to have a chat with Eddie Dyer, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals and a "chain store" baseball man from away back. . . Dyer doesn't claim he can show the independents how to make money in competition with the farms—but as a result of a wartime operations in the Texas League, Eddie can present facts and figures that might benefit the independent operators.

Here's How
When the Texas League suspended for the war, owner Sam Breadon first planned to shut up the Houston park. . . Dyer protested that it should be kept open as a good will gesture from the parent club to a city which had no other first-rate baseball facilities, so Eddie was given a go-ahead. . . "The first season," he says, "we split 50-50 with the city and made about $12,000 each. The next year it was more and last season, when I was in the oil business, the profit was over $50,000 in addition to the cuts for the city and the business manager." . . . Most of this money came from renting the park to sandlot and touring teams. . . Of course, Houston is a big enough city to develop a lot of such business, but why couldn't a smart operator in even a class "D" town find enough attractions to keep the rent money rolling in? . . . At least they wouldn't have to holler to some big league club to erase the red ink for them.

Punchy Paragraph
College football and basketball teams are generally known for long-distance travel for intercollegiate contests, but the very minor sport of intercollegiate boxing can roll up a lot of mileage. . . Next Saturday, for instance, the Wisconsin team travels to Charlottesville, Va., to swap punches with Virginia's mittmen north to meet Army at West Point. . . Those guys really will go a long way to look for a fight.

Monday Matinee
The Phillies' Bob Carpenter, who attended the December baseball meetings in his GI uniform, showed up at the week-end gatherings in a brand new suit—and a lot of other club owners wondered enviously where he got it. . . Commissioner "Happy" Chandler gleefully reports he was made an honorary sheriff on a recent visit to Waxahachie, Tex. . . Aaron Williams Corning, N. Y., horseman who died recently, left his three horses, Darnley, 1:59 3/4, Theone and Westfield Girl, to his trainer, Harry Whitney. Whitney immediately sold Westfield Girl to E. J. Baker of St. Charles, Ill. . . One explanation of why J. B. "Ears" Whitworth didn't take the Arkansas football coaching job: "They were shy on both salary and scholarships."

By The Associated Press
Today A Year Ago—Byron Nelson won the Corpus Christi 72-hole open golf tournament with a 264, 16 under par. Harold (Jug) McSpaden finished second, four strokes behind.
Three Years Ago—Bay Meadows cancelled its 50-day meeting at the request of Rubber Administrator William M. Jeffers.
Five Years Ago—Baseball Commissioner Landis struck a blow at the farm systems by ruling that major league clubs must obtain waivers on drafted players before they can be optioned to the minors.

Tucson Open Crown Is Won by Demaret

TUCSON, Ariz., Feb. 4.—(P)—Jimmy Demaret of Houston, Tex., today wears the Tucson open golf crown because the winds and sun couldn't prevail against him. He completed rounds of the tricky El Rio course yesterday in 68-63-68-69 for a 72-hole total of 268, four strokes better than his nearest competitor, Herman Barron of White Plains, N. Y., to win the $1,500 first prize. Barron received $1,000.

The first three rounds were played under a brilliant sun and a high, variable wind which made the course a nightmare for many contestants.
For instance, Dick Metz of Arkansas City, Kas., and Harold (Jug) McSpaden of Sanford, Me., carried 70s in their fourth rounds—even par—to occupy jointly the third position. They each earned $675.
Like Barron, E. J. (Dutch) Harrison of Little Rock, Ark., was off pace during the first three days of the tournament. But he took a 67 in the wind and completed the 72 holes tied with Al Zimmerman, Portland, Ore., Ray Mangrum, Los Angeles; Leland Gibson, Kansas City, Mo.; Jim Ferrier, Chicago and Henry Ransom, Houston, at 274. Each received $369.

A busy year for long distance

Before the year is out, the Bell System will put in more miles of long distance circuits than it did during the five years before the war. Work on a new construction program is going ahead rapidly, and the year 1946 will be a busy one for long distance.

Meanwhile, there's every reason to believe the volume of calls will continue at a high level, and that some delays will be unavoidable. If some of your calls are a bit slow getting through, you'll know faster and better service is on the way.

Pettis County Farm and Home News

Clubs Giving Student Loan Fund Support

Provision For Needy Freshmen At University

Pettis county home economics extension clubs are contributing to the student loan fund at the University of Missouri. It is hoped that each club in the county will make this a part of their program in 1946. Several clubs have already sent their gift of one dollar.

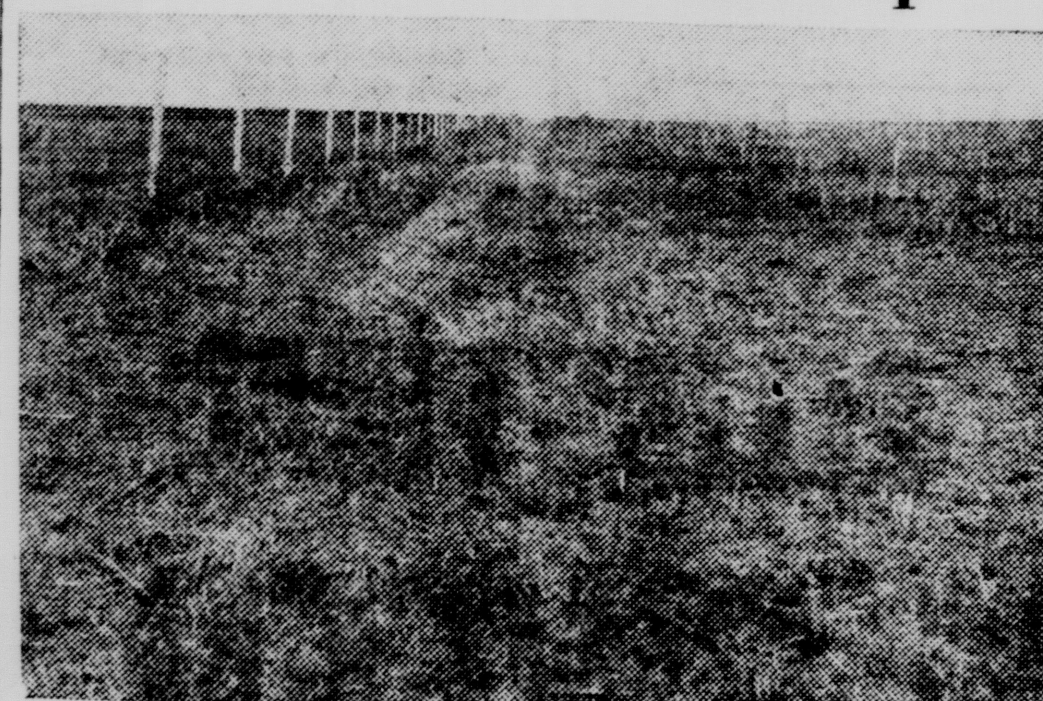

Of the many student loan funds at the University of Missouri, none has a more interesting story than that of the fund provided for freshman students by the Home Economics Extension clubs of the state. Started only eight years ago this fund has supplied $5,319 in loans to needy students and now has a cash balance of $4,017.

It was at Farm and Home Week at the University in October, 1937, that delegates from home economics extension clubs in all parts of the state decided to establish the fund. It was to be built up with gifts of $1 a year from all clubs whose members approved the plan. Within two years from that beginning more than $1,500 was contributed and 31 students were provided with loans.

Loans Total $5,319
By the end of 1945, according to Julia M. Rocheford, home economics extension specialist at the University, 201 loans had been made, reaching a total of $5,319, only $200 of which remains unpaid. Interest paid by borrowers has amounted to $158.58.

According to the agreement made with the University of Missouri, this fund is available to any freshman student entering any school or college of the University of Missouri at Columbia—prefer-

Sodded Grass Waterway On Farm Is Seeded To Redtop

The well-sodded grass waterway pictured above is in the Barnett T. Walker farm in the Houstonia community. It is over a quarter of a mile long, is 30 feet wide on the inside, and has a maximum slope in the channel of slightly over 3%. It is taking care of the water from 30 acres of terraced land.

This waterway was built in 1939 and the terraces turned in during 1941. It is seeded to redtop which Mr. Walker cuts with a grain binder while it is in bloom, leaving a five-inch stubble. So far the waterway is doing a very good job and the soil treatments it received during construction should insure continued good service if proper care is taken from year to year.

When outlets are properly leveled, manured, phosphated, and sown at the proper time with the proper grass mixture, very good vegetative cover for the area can be expected within 10 months to a year after the time of seeding.

Marion W. Clark, Extension specialist in agricultural engineering from the Missouri College of Agriculture reports in circular 355 entitled "Terrace Outlets for Missouri" that in seven years of experience all efforts had been successful when this system was followed carefully. This has been true even through drought years.

Indicates that more students should take advantage of this fund, says Miss Rocheford, since the purpose of each donor is to help any young man or woman who wants an education and yet needs some financial help.

The rural homemakers who provide this loan fund realize that they are not just planning for the education of the youth today, but for all time, since the Loan Fund will continue to grow as the years go by. It is an enterprise which belongs strictly to the rural women of Missouri and is intended for the benefit of rural youth who want to take advantage of it.

How To Sew Lambs' Eyes Open

At first glance the above title sounds quite cruel. However now and then, the lower eyelids of a young lamb will curl in against the eyeball causing the eye to remain closed and tears flow continuously. In a short time the lamb will be blind.

Sometimes wiping the lamb's eyes soon after birth with a dry cloth will prevent the trouble. The only known cure is to sew the lid open for a few days. This is a very simple operation. A small needle and common white thread is used. The first step is to take a one-eighth inch stitch through the skin of the jaw about an inch below the eye. Then roll the eyelid open and take a similar stitch crosswise through the lower lid just below its upper rim. Now draw the thread up and tie it so the lid is held just open and so it cannot turn nuder. Of course the needle and stitches should be disinfected.

The eye should then be wiped as dry as possible, some of the long wool around it clipped off, and a mild eye wash such as boric acid water could be used.

Generally the thread can be clipped in 2-3 days and no further trouble will be had.

Many folks have never heard of this trouble and unless they were looking for it would not recognize it. However it might be fairly common in Pettis county since the associate county agent, Merle Vaughan, found a case in a small flock of ten lambs recently. Both eyes needed to be treated in this case and the lamb now is getting along very well.

Concrete Stock Tank Fits Program

Allows Livestock To be Fenced From the Pond

Particularly adapted for use below ponds is a rectangular concrete stock tank. Such tanks appear below many newly built ponds over the state, points out Ralph Ricketts of the University of Missouri College of Agriculture.

The use of such a tank allows the livestock to be fenced from the pond. It is never advisable to permit livestock to drink directly from the pond, especially during hot weather. In this way the water is constantly kept muddy and contaminated.

With a concrete stock tank, the supply pipe comes up through the bottom of the tank and the water level in the tank is kept constant by a float valve attached to the intake pipe.

The tank should be located on a well-drained site below the pond dam. It may be any reasonable distance away from the dam as long as it is well below the elevation of the water surface but should not be closer than 20 to 30 feet of the pond dam. Some farmers build a concrete walk around the tank to prevent livestock cutting up the ground in wet weather. The ground around all newly built tanks should be graded so that rainfall drains away rapidly.

Measurements

The stock tank is eight feet long and three and one-half feet wide, outside measurements. The capacity is 325 gallons. The wall thickness is four inches at the top and slopes on the inside to a thickness of eight inches at the bottom of the walls. The depth of the tank is two feet six inches. One and one-half cubic yards of concrete are required for pouring the tank. Allowing a small amount for waste, one and one-half cubic yards of gravel and one cubic yard of sand should be secured. If good well-sanded creek gravel is available secure two yards. Use a mix of one part cement, two parts gravel, or if creek gravel is available use a mix of one part cement and four parts creek gravel.

It is better to use 180 feet of 3/4-inch reinforcing rods to reinforce the tank. However, if the tank is not allowed to freeze woven wire may be used with a ring of 1/2-inch reinforcing rod or this equivalent around the top of the tank.

Construction Biggest Job

The biggest job of most concrete work is the construction of the forms. The demand for stock tanks below ponds has been so great that the University Agricultural Engineering Department has worked out plans for portable forms. These forms simply bolt together and can be used over and over again. The inside forms are supported, which allows the bottom of the tank and sides to be poured at the same time, thus casting the tank as one unit. In some counties, such forms have been built and are rented to those desiring them.

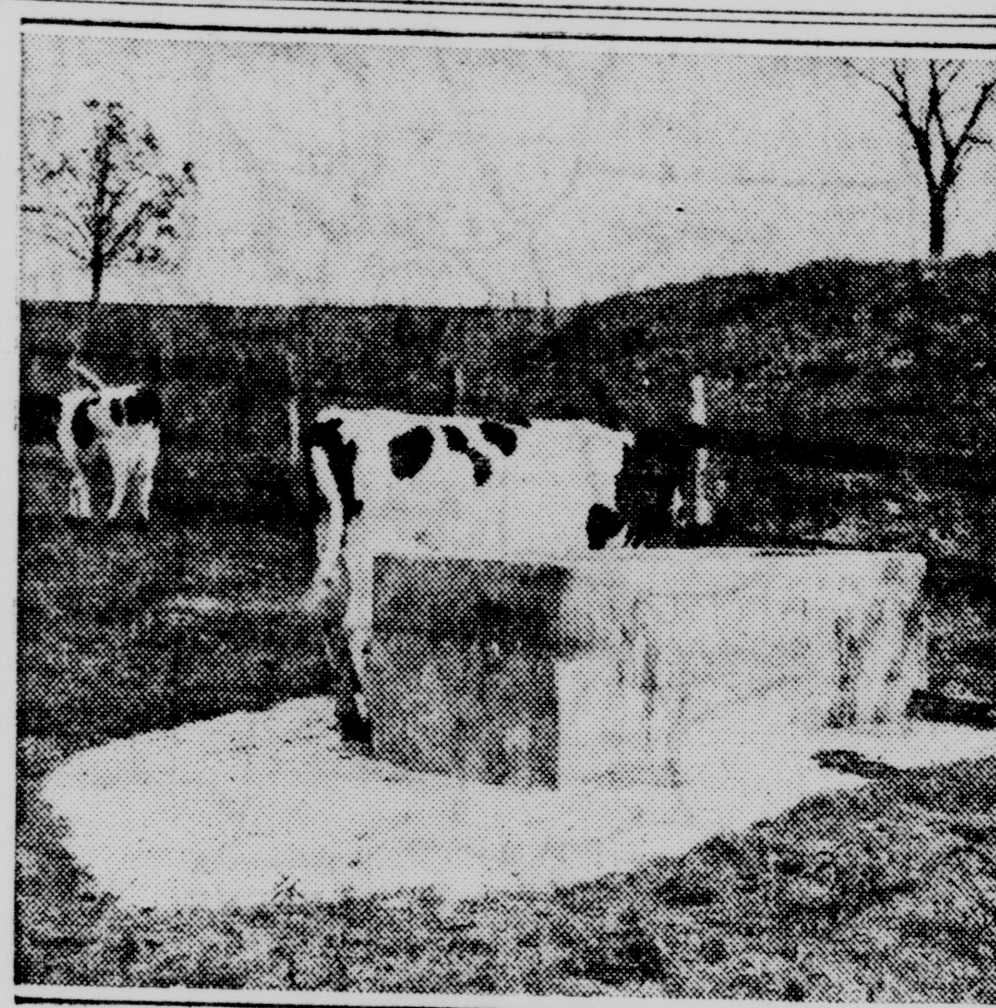

Mimeographed instructions for pouring the tank and the blue print for making the forms are available at the county extension office, 410 1/2 South Ohio street, Sedalia.

Livestock Meetings Dates

A number of livestock meetings will be held in Pettis county beginning Tuesday, February 5th. The Farm Bureau livestock committee and the extension staff will be in charge of these meetings. The motion picture, "Three More Little Pigs Go To Market", which deals primarily with swine sanitation and pastures will be shown at each of the meetings. The livestock outlook for 1946 will be presented by J. U. Morris, county extension agent. This outlook should give information to livestock producers which will help them materially in planning their livestock program.

All meetings will begin at 7:45 p. m. Pettis county livestock producers and others interested in livestock production are invited to attend the meeting most convenient for them.

The schedule of meetings is as follows:
La Monte, High school, Tuesday, February 5.
Longwood, High School, Wednesday, February 6.
Houstonia, High school, Thursday, February 7.
Hughesville, High school, Friday, February 8.
Green Ridge, High School, Monday, February 11.
Ionia, Community Hall, Wednesday, February 13.
Smithton, High school, Thursday, February 14.

Wrap Meat Well Before It Goes Into The Freezer

It's slaughtering time and many of your put your meat in cold storage lockers. The way meat is wrapped and put in a locker may make the difference between good meat and poor meat. Meat needs special wrapping to keep its natural moisture and flavor. If it isn't wrapped properly ice will evaporate from the frozen meat and leave a dry, tough outer layer called "freezer burn". When meat gets freezer burn its appearance and texture change and the flavor is lost or altered.

It is usually preferable to have an experienced trained person to cut and wrap the meat for the locker. If such service is not available here are some suggestions.

Divide your meat into portions of the right size for your family. Remove any bony, sharp edges as they prevent a compact, smooth, tight package and may puncture the wrappings and let out moisture. Shape meat into compact form to save locker space and to make wrapping easier and more perfect. If you have several pieces of meat in one package, place sheets of waxed paper between them so they can be separated while still frozen.

Wrap Tight

Pull the wrapping sheet tight against the meat to force out the air. Fold the two edges of the paper together to make a double seam. Then fold the ends of the paper together and fold them tight against the meat. This is called drug-store wrap. It is important to have a little air in the package.

Tie securely. If you can, heatseal the package by passing a warm iron over seam. Or close the seams with paper tape.

Good wrapping materials for frozen meat are the special cellophane bags and lartex containers. Cellophane bags are heat sealed and placed in pasteboard cartons. Don't use butcher paper next to meat or fish. It is hard to get off when you thaw the meat, it doesn't protect against drying, and it may add off flavors to the meat. Use butcher paper only as a second wrapping to prevent tearing the inner wrapping.

Start With Good Meat

Wrapping properly does not guarantee good freezer locker meat, however. If you put poor meat in a locker you will get poor meat out. Your animal should be well finished before it is killed, to give good meat.

When taking the meat out of the locker, if it is some distance from your home, it is well to wrap the meat in several thicknesses of paper, in a blanket, or to have an insulated box to place it in. The meat should not thaw out while taking it home. You can make an insulated box by setting one cardboard container inside another and filling the space in between with sawdust or paper.

Sprays For Killing of Chicken Mites

If you have chicken mites in your poultry house, here are three sprays, any one of which should kill them. One of these is a spray containing cresote; another is a lime sulfur spray containing one part of concentrated lime sulfur to ten parts water. Or you can use kerosene alone. Incidentally, D.D.T. has not proven very effective against mites in early tests.

Control Hog Mange

The treatment for hog mange is one part commercial lime-sulphur to 15 parts of water. Dip for 2 minutes at 100 to 102 degrees fahrenheit. Repeat in six or seven days. It may be necessary to repeat it a second or third time.

Average Age of Operation

In Pettis county in 1940 one male in every six was 60 years of age or over. The average age of farm operators in Pettis county in 1940 was 50.6 years of age while the full owners averaged 57 years of age and the tenants averaged 44.2 years.

The proportion of older persons on Missouri farms is increasing. In 1870 only one person in 50 in Missouri was 60 years of age and over. By 1940 the proportion of older persons in the farm population of the state had increased until one individual in every eight was in this age class. If this rate of change continues, by 1960 one farm person in every six will be sixty years of age or over.

Boy Scout
Week Starts
Friday, Feb. 8

Local Council
To Have Pot Luck
Supper February 11

Nearly two million Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts, Senior Scouts, and their adult leaders throughout the United States will commemorate Boy Scout Week, which begins Friday, February 8, and continues through February 14, Thursday. The theme of the observance, which marks the 36th anniversary of the founding of the movement in America, is "Scouts of the World—Building Together."

Boy Scout Week will be observed in every city and town and in nearly every village and hamlet in the nation. Since Feb. 8, 1910, when the Boy Scouts of America was incorporated at Washington, D. C., more than 12 million, 5 hundred thousand men and boys have been in Scouting. The active membership today is more than 1,950,000 Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, Senior Scouts, and adult volunteer leaders.

Hundreds of former members will gather at Troop Reunions, which this year, in many cases means returned Scout Leaders and Senior Scouts mustered out of the armed forces. It is estimated that one-quarter of the men in the armed forces were once Boy Scouts.

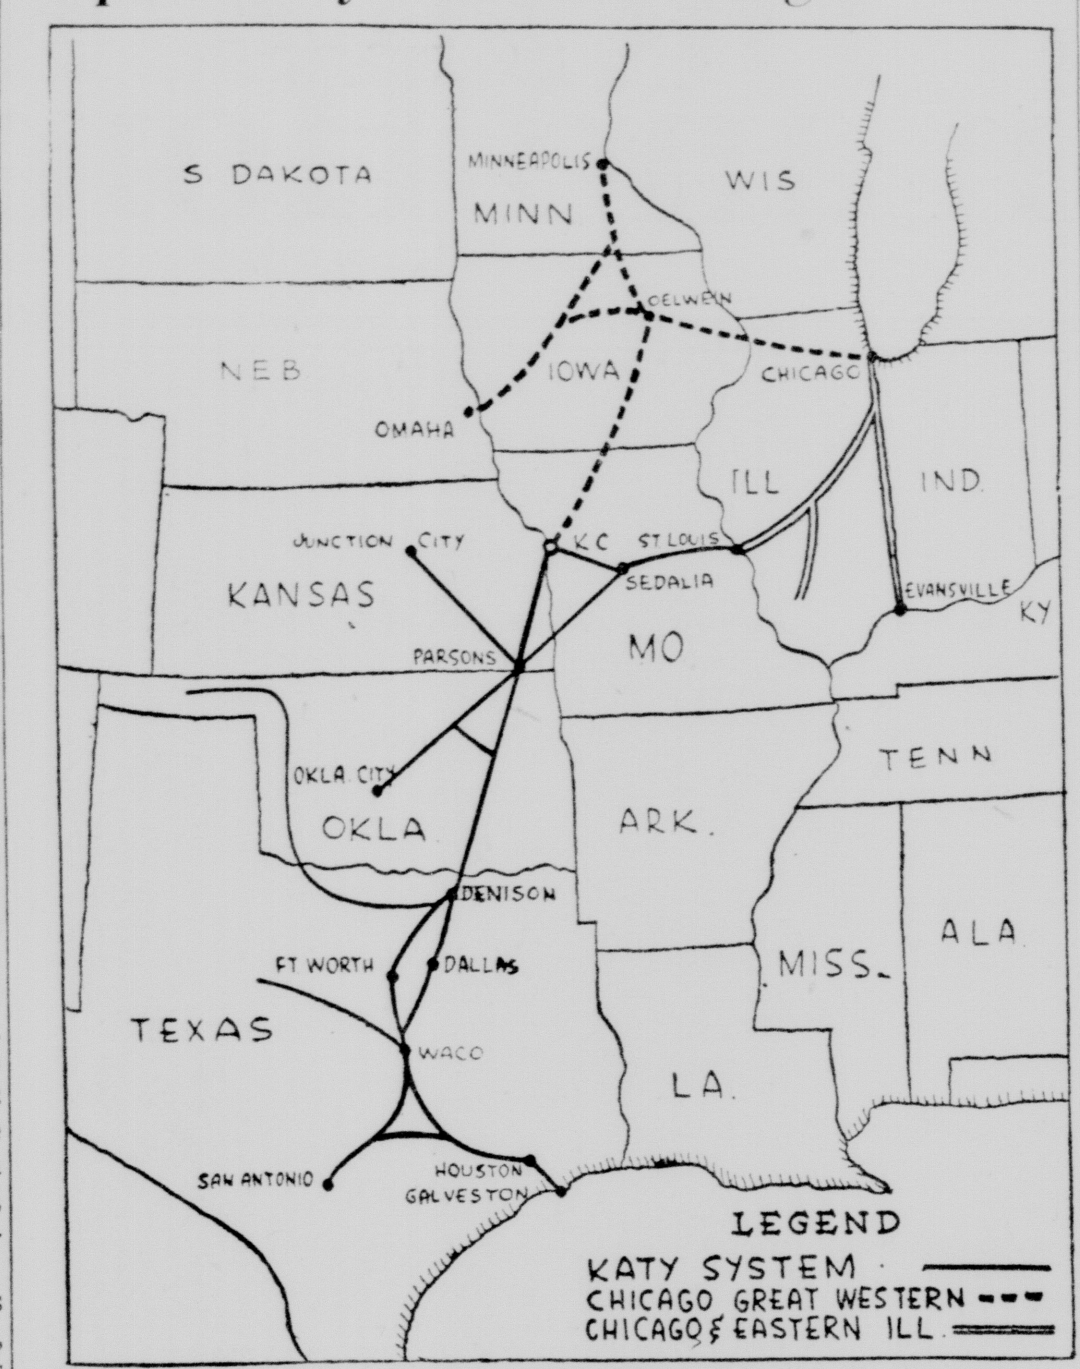

There will be District Pot Luck Dinners, and Scout Rallies, bringing together many Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts and their parents. In this way parents get to know more about the Scouting Program, the boys with whom their sons work and play, and the high type of volunteer leaders that are attracted to the movement.

Special Scout Services

Boy Scout Sunday, February 10, will see hundreds of thousands of uniformed Boy Scouts attending large city cathedrals or small village churches with their troops or Scouts of their own faith. Those of Jewish faith will hold their observance in synagogues and temples Friday evening, February 8 and Saturday, February 9. Many sermons, addressed to the Scouts, will dwell upon the World Brotherhood theme of the anniversary. Scout Sunday collections will be used for the World Friendship Fund by many.

The twelfth point of the Scout Law reads: "A Scout is Reverent." He is reverent toward God. He is faithful in his religious duties, and respects the convictions of others in matters of custom and religion." During Boy Scout Week, Scouts take over scores of windows, and theatre and office lobbies to display their handicraft and demonstrate some skills they acquired through Scouting. Hundreds of new Cub Scouts are to be inducted with appropriate ceremonies. At troop meetings, Scouts will rededicate themselves to the Scout Oath or Promise, and the Scout Law.

Last Year A Busy One

The year of victory, 1945, saw the Boy Scouts complete their 70th war service project, each of which was requested by some top-ranking federal official. They took part in all eight bond drives, not only helping local bond committees but visited millions of homes and have been responsible for the sales of approximately $2,000,000,000 worth of bonds and stamps.

When federal officials called on young Americans to plant victory gardens and work on farms to meet the unprecedented need for food production last year, the Boy Scouts responded with the "Green Thumb" campaign. Thousands of Scout gardens were cultivated and harvested. The National Victory Garden Institute awarded to 20,000 Boy Scouts the General MacArthur Garden Medal for doing superior jobs in raising and harvesting a variety of produce.

Last spring, the Boy Scouts pitched in and helped the United National Old Clothes program collecting ten per cent, or 15,000 tons of the 150,000 tons of serviceable used clothing, shoes and bedding obtained for destitute people overseas.

Eisenhower's Tribute

General Eisenhower's tribute to Scouting follows:
"The Boy Scout Movement merits the unstinted support of every American who wants to make this country and his world a better place in which to live. Its emphasis on community service and tolerance and world friendship promotes a speedier attainment of the enduring peace among men for which we all strive."

"By developing among its members both a spirit of sturdiness, self reliance and a realization of the need for cooperative effort in every major enterprise, the movement is a prime force in preparing tomorrow's men for their duty to themselves, their country and their world. "Here in the United States, the Boy Scouts of America has accomplished much in its 36 years of service. But today, more than ever before, we need expansion of its membership and influence."

The local council plans a pot luck supper for Monday night, February 11, at the armory.

Community Teachers Meet

A Community Teachers' meeting was held at Smith-Cotton high school Saturday morning at 10 o'clock with Mrs. Clyde Heynen, president, presiding over the business session.

Herbert Hoover and Harry Truman were chosen to represent the long line of presidents in the musical program, the theme of which was "Music of the Presidents." The Spanish selection, "La Campana," depicting the California setting of Hoover's home, and "The Missouri Waltz," representative of Truman's home state, were played as duo-piano numbers by Mrs. Ralph Salmon and Miss Mary Schrankler.

Introduced by Dr. Heber U. Hunt, Col. Jack McLaughlin addressed the group, relating his observations and experiences while serving overseas in the areas of
